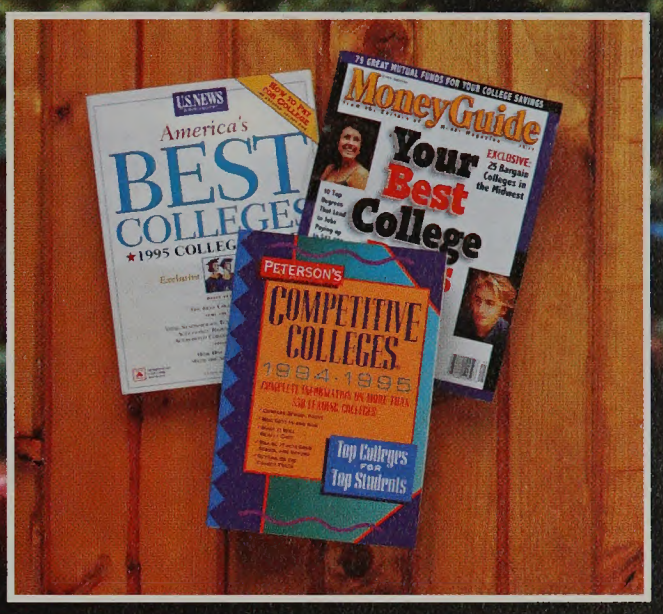
CENTENARY COLLEGE OF LOUISIANA

Your path to success starts here



If you're looking for a challenging, high quality education, take a close look at Centenary College of Louisiana. We're a college that has your success at heart. We'll help you by providing:

- a national reputation that will open doors for you
- an education that takes you far beyond the classroom
- caring professors who make your success top priority

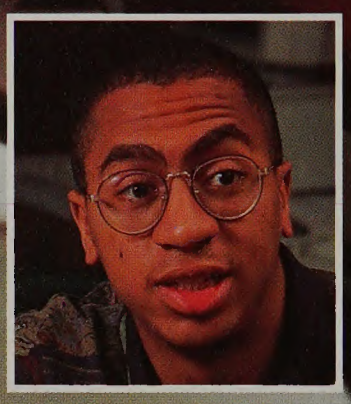
Dr. Joel Cannon
Aljay's academic advisor

"Centenary definitely has a good reputation and offers a far better education than some larger schools. One reason why is the increased student-professor contact. As Aljay's advisor, I've enjoyed getting to know him both as a student and as a person. I'm confident he'll be very successful."*



Aljay Foreman
Pre-Engineering
Beaumont, Texas

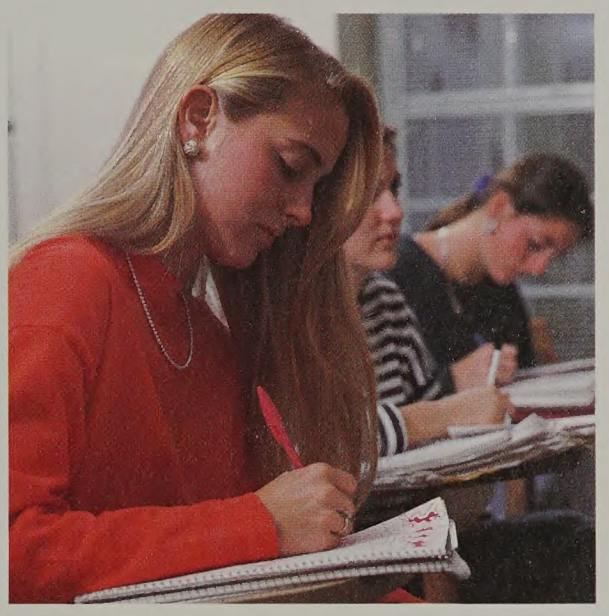
"Before I came here, I had heard you could get a great education at Centenary. Now I'm experiencing it. The attitude here really is, 'Once you leave this school, you're going to go somewhere and be something.'*

"Another reason you get a good education here is because you really get to know your professors. For me, Dr. Cannon has been a real confidence-builder. When I was choosing my physics major, he said, 'I believe you can do it.' That's part of what keeps me going."

Centenary's reputation will open doors for you

The path to success is wide — provided you get off to a strong start. With a degree from Centenary College of Louisiana, you'll do just that.

A nationally respected college



As a top-ranking liberal arts college, we can help you get your share of success — because our reputation will precede you most places you go.

Centenary's reputation isn't just known to national magazines and selective college guides. It's also known by leading employers and graduate schools — people who, a few years from now, will immediately recognize our name alongside yours when you send them a resume or graduate school application.

Your success won't be limited to the U.S. either — because our network of accomplished alumni has carried our name throughout the world. From CEOs in the oil industry to top performing artists in New York. From Pulitzer-Prize writers in journalism to professional athletes in the NBA. From award-winning scientists in the South to successful business leaders in Germany to an environmental law specialist in Washington, D.C. The list goes on.

In short, we're the kind of school that can open doors for you. No matter where you want to go.

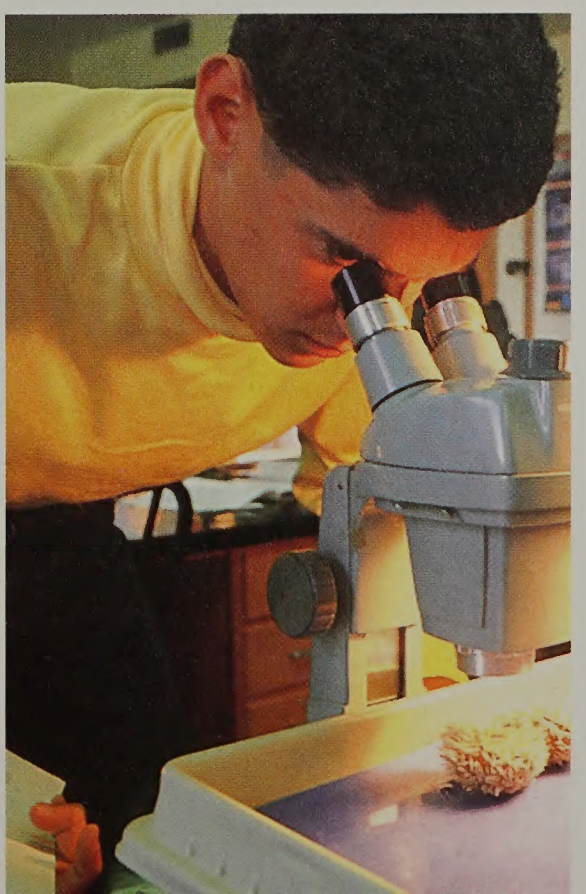
Our graduates can compete with anyone

Last year . . .

- 9 of every 10 Centenary students were either accepted into graduate school or hired within a month of graduating.
- The graduating class received scholarships to graduate schools such as Rice, Yale, and Princeton and were recruited by leading firms from New York to the Netherlands.
- Our graduates were accepted into the graduate schools of their choice at a rate that at times was nearly triple the national average.*

*Medical schools, which last year on average accepted fewer than 3 of 10 students, accepted 8 of every 10 from Centenary.

Centenary is one of the country's best colleges, according to national publications and selective guides to college education.



Your success is our priority

What's behind the success of our students? It's the way our professors teach you.

Professors are your partners in learning

Just ask any student here. You'll quickly find out. At Centenary, the professors are there for you far more than you would expect. They'll meet with you after class, on the phone in the evening, sometimes even in their homes. Put simply, they specialize in personal attention.

"Professors here expect to work with you one-on-one," says David, a sophomore biology and math major. "The main thing they say is, 'if you don't understand something, ask for help. That's why we're here. We want to help you any way we can.'"

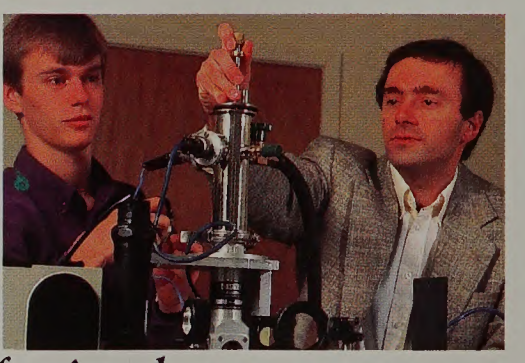
Importantly, the help you get goes beyond just coursework. Professors here will groom you to compete with the best, whether that means guiding you through original research projects, helping you design a professional career plan, or calling people to connect you with jobs and graduate schools.

"At Centenary, you create partnerships with your professors that affect your life," says Corey, Centenary's student body president. "It's a big reason why students here are so successful."

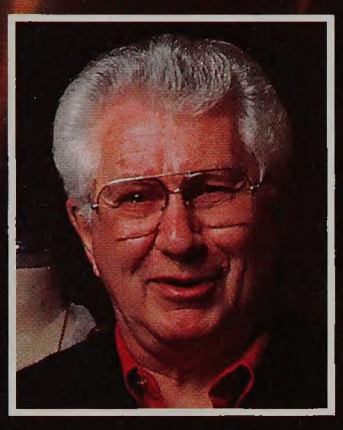
Professors will challenge you

Imagine you are in a class with just 10 or so students. You know everyone's name. Your professor regularly asks how you're doing. You find yourself meeting challenges you didn't know you could meet.

That's what it's like at Centenary. Our master teachers will give you an intensive learning experience — probably the most intense learning you've had up to now. There will be lots of give and take, and plenty of chances for you and your classmates to lead the discussion.



It's a challenging education you can handle, especially when you know you're being taught by a professional.



Robert Buseick
Brooks Ann's theater professor

"In my work here, I approach each student differently because each student works differently. Brooks Ann is a great example. I've learned she works very cautiously at first. Then, all of a sudden, you say 'Wow!' You realize just where she's been and the journey she's taken."

Brooks Ann Camper
Theater
Lindale, Texas

"At Centenary, the professors really are here to help you. You don't feel awkward around them or feel uncomfortable. Instead, you can go right up and talk to them — just like you'd go up to any person you know is going to help you.

"It's also very one-on-one here. As a theater major, I've learned to know Bob Buseick who directs most of the shows. He takes everything you've got and puts it on stage so you don't hold anything back. I've ended up doing things I never thought I could do."

Jennifer Dent
Education
Shreveport, Louisiana

Dr. John Turner
Jennifer's education professor

"When I graduate, I feel I'll have the 'edge' on someone who hasn't had the extra opportunities I've had in my field. For example, everyone in my major has to do student teaching — but I chose to also volunteer in the community through the Centenary Plan. I think that will give me an advantage.*

"For me, it all goes back to a conversation I had with Dr. Turner, who probably had the biggest influence on my decision to become a teacher. He listened and understood. When he suggested I go into education, I really thought it over."

"With the Centenary Plan, students gain a new perspective and obtain direction for what they want to do. Jennifer served the same neighborhood she grew up in. One reason it's important to her to become a teacher is because she is interested in helping others."*

An education that takes you far beyond the classroom

To succeed in today's competitive workplace, you need real-life experience. Centenary makes sure you get it.

The Centenary Plan — education for life

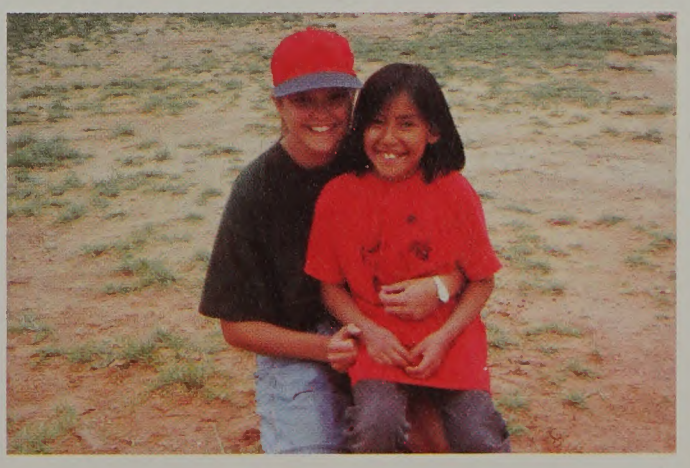
Through our Centenary Plan, you'll gain valuable life experience in real-life, hands-on settings. Not only will this plan add substance to your resume, it will also give you the chance to try out your career interests, to experience other cultures, and to express your personal values.

Here are the three powerful components of the plan:

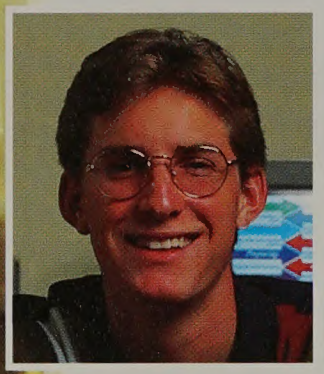
A prime professional internship.
Would you like to be an intern at a Fortune 500 company? An aid to an attorney or a senator? A research assistant at one of Louisiana's largest medical centers? These are just a few of the options available to our students — including assignments across the U.S. and around the world. You'll find a variety of positions to choose from, usually a semester in length. And yours might even end with a job offer.

A trip to another culture at home or abroad.
Get ready for exciting, eye-opening and possibly even life-changing experiences. Study theater in London — or Greek in Greece. Live with a host family in Ekaterinburg, Russia. Accompany your biology professor to Central America's Talamanca mountains. Find out how the Hopi tribe gets along with its Navajo neighbors. Whether you choose a three-week-long trip or stay for a semester, you'll be learning to live and succeed in a multicultural world, and you'll come home with an array of new understandings.

A short stint for a cause you believe in.
What's most important to you? For this part of the Centenary Plan, you volunteer at a community service project that appeals to you. Like a United Way agency. A home-building project with Habitat for Humanity. Or an educational advocacy group that supports people with AIDS. You can choose to make a difference single-handedly — or join with a friend or a group as you give a few days of your time to demonstrating your knowledge and dedication.



Taken together, these life experiences will give you practical tools for success, plus sure-fire ways to set yourself apart from the crowd.



Edward Wicker
Business/Spanish
New Orleans, Louisiana

"Centenary has been a perfect fit for me, even though I wasn't sure what field I'd go into when I arrived. For the first year, I took care of some required classes and was able to get a feel for everything. That's something a lot of people do here.

"I chose my major a month ago — international business — and I now have the direction I need. My advisor helped me weigh the options, and Dr. Welborn helped out too. She was thrilled that I added a minor in Spanish. She said it's something all the companies are looking for."

"At Centenary, it's okay to be undecided about your major. Students here get wonderful direction from their academic advisors and they also help each other a lot. Eddie is someone who has decided to combine his interests. In today's economy, his decision to add a foreign language to his business major can't help but be an asset."

Career Center advisor

It's okay to be undecided

If you're not yet sure of your career choice, don't worry. Each fall, a substantial number of Centenary students enroll with an "undecided" major.

To help you decide on a major, your faculty advisor will guide you through a sampling of courses, and our Career Center will support you with a full array of services.

We'll help you explore your options and find a good fit.

Nationally known programs

Students at Centenary choose from our renowned programs in science, education, the arts, and business — plus a host of other strong options. You'll also find unique majors and programs like biophysics, environmental science, and church careers.

Small classes taught by master teachers only

At Centenary, you won't be taught by graduate teaching assistants in large lecture halls. Instead, you'll be taught by seasoned professionals at a student-teacher ratio of just 11:1.

Special opportunities

Are your sights set skyward? Do you want to be a Rhodes Scholar, for example? If so, our professors can provide extra guidance from the word "go." Centenary students have been recognized as Rhodes and Truman Scholars, Mellon Fellows, and Rotary International Fellows — to name just a few.

Extra support for success

At Centenary, you'll also have access to . . .

- a personal academic advisor who provides career advising beginning your very first year
- experienced students who give you an "insider's" view when you arrive for orientation
- personal counseling services, plus numerous student support groups and clubs
- an active Career Center that offers valuable placement services, visits by graduate school and corporate recruiters, job fairs, and assistance with resumes and interview skills

You'll feel comfortable at Centenary — no matter where you're from Warm and inviting. Open and personal. It would be hard to find a more comfortable place to learn.

An accepting environment

As noted below, Centenary has been recognized as being exceptionally "open" to persons of diverse backgrounds and cultures. And for good reason.

Our campus community is greatly enhanced by international students from Bosnia to Brazil, as well as by a growing and substantial minority of students from Hispanic, African-American, Asian-American, and Native American backgrounds.

In addition, every student here experiences at least one other culture through the Centenary Plan.

To celebrate our diversity, recent events on campus have included Asian Culture Week, African-American History Week, Kwanzaa, and guest speakers like poet Maya Angelou and author Ernest Gaines. A student organization, Centenary Students for Cultural Diversity, helps make such events possible.

Residence halls — for friendship, fun, and support

For added support and friendship, Centenary students find the residence halls to be an important hub of activity. In addition to being comfortable, our on-campus accommodations provide quick access to everything Centenary offers, including friends who won't let you miss out on all that's going on.

We often hear students say their best friends, best times, and best learning happen through residence hall connections.

At Centenary, students of all backgrounds enjoy a welcoming learning environment, as recognized in The 100 Best Colleges for African-American Students.

Pei Ching "Peaches" Lo
Business
Taiwan

"When I first came, I remember thinking that people were very friendly at Centenary. The smaller campus makes it easier to meet friends, and people here are always smiling and asking 'how are you doing?'

"My advisor is Barbara Davis, and she really understands the international students here. Whenever I go to see her, she pays close attention to every word I say. I've found her to be very encouraging."

Barbara Davis
Pei Ching's academic advisor

"I honestly believe Centenary is one of the friendliest places I've ever been. We really work hard to make sure everyone feels a part of things. My times with Peaches have reminded me that each person brings a unique and special perspective."

Glenn Evans
Martha's soccer coach

"Athletics is an exciting rallying point here because most students know who the players are and we're really proud of them. Martha is someone we've come to expect a lot from. She's very dedicated and focused. She gets the job done. She'll be successful after graduation too."

"The most-liked activity here is probably intramurals, but there are many other opportunities too. Right now, I'm on the women's soccer team, a member of the Centenary Catholic Community, part of some honor societies, and I serve on the Student Athlete Advisory Board.

"On the soccer team, our head coach is Glenn Evans, and he motivates us a lot. He sets goals for the year and he emphasizes that being on the team teaches you discipline. Even if we're playing badly, he says, 'Pick it up. I know you can do better.'"

A college for active students

There's plenty to do at Centenary. And that means plenty of opportunities to be a star.

Our size means big advantages for you

With just under a thousand students, you'll find it's easy to get involved here. You might join our spirited group of film critics, win a seat in the Student Senate, or lend your talents to Escaped Images, our dance troupe. The choices — including a rich array of campus traditions — are awaiting your arrival.

An outstanding tradition of theater, dance, and music

Win a spot on stage or sit back and enjoy the show. Either way, you'll find an arts tradition here that dazzles your soul. Options at Centenary include:

- Rivertowne Players
- Centenary College Choir
- Camerata, a small group of selected vocalists
- Opera Theater
- Escaped Images, a dance troupe
- Chamber Orchestra
- Wind Ensemble
- Jazz Ensemble

Recent highlights: 10-day choir tour across Europe, new graduate Paul Belcher's appointment as stage manager in the La Jolla Theater production of How to Succeed in Business.

Famous graduates: TV producer Rick Hawkins (Major Dad), Broadway actor Lee Morgan (Tommy), costume designer Patric McWilliams (Steel Magnolias).

Facilities: comprehensive arts facilities include a playhouse, art center, art museum, music library, and amphitheater.

NCAA Division 1 athletics

Join the competition against schools like Georgia State and Florida International in the Trans-America Athletic Conference — or watch from the sidelines and cheer your friends on to victory!

Men's teams		Women's teams
baseball	riflery	cross-country	softball
basketball	soccer	gymnastics	tennis
cross-country	tennis	riflery	volleyball
golf		soccer

Recent highlights: men's soccer — three straight titles (1988-90); women's tennis — 16 straight winning seasons (1979-present).

Famous graduates: NBA all-star Robert Parish, Olympic gymnast Kathy Johnson, PGA player Hal Sutton.

Facilities: comprehensive athletic facilities include a sports dome, gymnasium, over a dozen tennis and racquetball courts, athletic fields for softball, soccer, and baseball, and modern training and exercise rooms.

More ways to get involved

When we say, 'there's plenty to do here,' we're not just talking to athletes and artists. We mean there's something for everyone.

A potpourri of organizations

As a Centenary student, you can join in any number of the following:

- weekly convocations featuring special guest speakers (recent notables have included science fiction author Ray Bradbury, Pulitzer Prize novelist Eudora Welty, and German economist B. G. Speis)
- a variety of clubs for students in specific majors — from physics to physical education, chemistry to accounting
- extensive intramurals, including basketball, football, soccer, racquetball, softball, tennis, and volleyball

- Student Government Association, including over a dozen student councils and committees that help run the college
- student newspaper, the Conglomerate — recently awarded the highest rating by the American Collegiate Press
- Pep Band
- Leading Ladies Dance Line
- Film Society
- KSCL-FM, the student radio station
- Centenary Students for Cultural Diversity
- Yoncopin, the student yearbook
- Pandora, the student literary magazine

Plus a host of service, honorary, and religious organizations ranging from a Habitat for Humanity chapter to the Baptist Student Union to the Episcopal Canterbury House to over a dozen national societies promoting academic excellence, like Alpha Chi, Sigma Gamma Epsilon, and Omicron Delta Kappa.

Rich campus traditions

Centenary offers a wealth of well-loved campus traditions, including:

Fall Fest
Founders Day
Faculty Follies
Homecoming
Christmas Ball
Shenandoah Shakespeare Express
Spring Fling
Swap Day
French Film Festival

Fraternities and sororities

New "Greeks" are always welcome — and non-members often join in the fun.

A campus of striking beauty

Students and visitors alike say Centenary's campus looks just like a college campus should.

A near-perfect learning environment

One walk across campus and you'll agree: It's hard to imagine a more beautiful campus than Centenary's.

During a typical day of classes, you'll stroll past well-kept gardens of azaleas and roses, through shaded groves of magnolias, across fabled footbridges, and into high-ceilinged, stately halls of learning.

It's a classic college campus — the kind you'd expect behind a 170-year tradition of success.

A host of nearby "learning laboratories"

The Centenary campus is just minutes from the heart of Shreveport, a city of some 250,000 people. Known as a regional center for culture and science in Louisiana, Shreveport offers a wealth of internship sites, including large regional medical centers, over a half-dozen Fortune 500 companies, three professional sports teams, an opera company, a ballet, a symphony orchestra, and a theatre district featuring four community drama groups.

You'll also find Shreveport offers rich Southern and Cajun traditions evident in cultural events throughout the year — from the Red River Revel, an arts festival each fall, to a Holiday Lights Festival at year end to our own regional Mardi Gras each spring.

A region offering numerous recreational opportunities

From sighting alligators on Cross Lake to enjoying jambalaya in a great selection of restaurants, the area surrounding Centenary is an attractive tourism spot known as the "sportsman's paradise." Beautiful lakes and bayous surround the city, and you'll have easy access to spectacular hiking and camping sites, state parks, and wilderness areas near campus. In addition, a short drive takes you to the many attractions of Dallas, Little Rock, and New Orleans.

College Profile

Centenary is centrally located in the South, and is just three hours from Dallas and Little Rock.

The College: private, four-year, liberal arts, primarily undergraduate, affiliated with the United Methodist Church. Founded in 1825.

Degrees: bachelor of arts, bachelor of music, bachelor of science. Master's in business administration, education, and geology.

Just one visit will convince you

One visit to Centenary is usually all it takes to decide. So come see firsthand how we can seal your success. To arrange a visit, call 1-800-234-4448. We'll be happy to show you around campus, arrange for you to visit classes, meet professors, and spend the night in a residence hall. If you like, you can also meet with a financial aid advisor to learn just how affordable a Centenary education can be.

Please call to arrange your visit at least one week in advance. If you'd like to visit classes, please plan to come on a Monday, Wednesday, or Friday.

We hope to hear from you soon!

You can afford a Centenary education

At $13,812 for the 1995-96 school year (includes tuition, room, and board), Centenary is affordable for most families, especially when you consider that your chances of receiving aid here are excellent. On a recent student survey, students here rated our financial aid "99" out of a possible 100. In addition, at least 8 of every 10 students receive assistance.

Each year, the college awards over $5.5 million in aid through academic scholarships, departmental scholarships, institutional grants, federal and state grants and loans, and student employment. In addition to need-based awards, generous merit scholarships are awarded annually based on academic achievement, special talents, leadership, and other outstanding abilities.

Please don't hesitate to apply for aid. You can count on a quick and personal response from us. We also offer flexible payment options and can guarantee specific tuition rates through graduation.
